Steve Konchalski receives award on behalf of Tom

During the televised event, Steve was interviewed by the emcee, ESPN analyst Sean Farnham. Speaking of Tom he said, "Most of all, Tom was motivated by his faith. He felt he was carrying out his mission in life by helping young men reach their highest basketball potential." Tom had some iconic evaluation lines in his HSBI report, "he's a mountain masquerading as a man, he has body of a blacksmith and the touch of a surgeon." Steve said, "Before social media, the college coaches relied on Tom's word. When evaluating high school basketball talent, Tom's word was gospel."

Tom Konchalski Foundation/Big Apple Basketball Sponsors Free Workouts For NYC PSAL Players

Impressive summer program

Foundation Board of Directors member, Jason Curry, led this program of 8 workouts at gyms in Manhattan, Queens, Brooklyn and the Bronx. This helped public school players develop their basketball skills while emphasizing

Tom's values of faith, integrity, sportsmanship and teamwork.

Summer overnight Camps

Many thanks to Coach Bob Hurley, Rob Kennedy and the Hoop Group for your support and helping make this happen!

The TK Foundation sponsored 8 boys to the Hoop Group Camps. Tom believed that overnight summer camps were a great opportunity for city boys to experience both for the camaraderie and skills development.

Website Sponsors Needed

The Foundation website tomkfoundation.org will have a new and improved look! We are seeking two sponsors who will be appropriately recognized for their support on the new website.

The cost is $2,500 each. Would you, your business or organization wish to help in this important initiative? Or perhaps you know someone who would like to jump in. Please let us know.
